

I am concerned that the standards proposed in RM-10740 would effectively prohibit the operation of many historic military radios by licensed amateurs. Relatively few amateurs operate historic military radios, but those who do are preserving an important part of America's military and technical history. These operations only occupy a small proportion of the amateur bandwidth. The FCC should take care not to inadvertantly silence those amateurs who operate historic military radios responsibly.